On Behalf of Thailand, I am very honored to welcome the executives and librarians from more than 10 countries of total 80 participants. During the past 2 years, the world has been confronting the pandemic situation of COVID-19. It has affected our life and work enormously. We need to change our work style and strategy in the area of administration, services and data management in order to reach the target groups properly, rapidly and in a timely manner. It's there fore important to distribute and pass on data through various forms of media among the public to receive data and information for knowledge, understanding and practice under the crisis situation. The data analysis and the usage in a timely manner are the key strategy.

Thailand has established the administration and management for crisis situation which includes systematic work, and decision making has been done through statistics, under the Thai culture working style, we give each other moral support, voluntary spirit, close monitoring, follow up and report. As you can see, we have village health volunteers, provide check up, monitory, and watch for the village members. They also report to the concerned units. This reflects the systematic administration, services and management in Thai culture. As a result, Thailand has been recognized for its good administration under the crisis situation.
